WE have often heard complaint that Salina's alley- were too narrow both for business and cleanlines-One of our exchanges, published in a city having alleys forty feet wide, complains that it was a mistake in devoting so much space to alleys. The paper says:

Fifteen feet is more than enough. The lots should have been made deeper and the alleys narrower. In the residence portion of the city already this mistake is making itself manifest in the littered and untidy alleys filled with old boxes and barrels, ash heaps and tomato cans. Assaria Argus: A serious accident happened at Mentor on Wednesday to an old man named John. A Voliberg, who lives 5 miles north-west of Salina. He was returning homewards with a load of wood from the river, and cared for by Mrs. Carlson, who is his niece. Dr. Crawford sewed up the wound. He found that the skull was slightly fracturd. Anniversary Exercises at the Wealeyan-Last Thursday night found a full house to hear the fall term anniversary exercises of the Wesleyan Universty. A good programme was prepared and carried out.

The audience was called to order by Dr. Schuyler, and the University orchestra of ten pieces played an overture. This band of players make good music and always please an audience.

Rev. A. N. See offered prayer. Robert Harris then delivered the Deathbed of Benedict Arnold." Both of these speakers showed a careful study and good understanding of the characters they personated. We wish such pieces of classical English were always chosen for such occasions. Besides, the value to the speakers themselves the recital of such historical events does much to educate an aud-

lence of students. Another excellent piece by the orchestra was cheered by the listeners. The oration, " Ich Dien," (I serve) by Edith Collins, was a well composed and a well delivered production. Her graphic description of the poor, blind King John, as he fought in the battle of Creey, formed a fitting introduction to the central Last Monday J. W. Adams shipped to tienl. She said the blind king did no more than many another does in every land; that the Steadman Post, No. 185, Dec. 15, the martyrs of the kitchen and needle give the privilege of paying fill many more graves than the untion's defenders; that Christ taught by both example and precept that service alone gives the highest, purest and best human lives. The speaker seemed to feel every word she uttered and her earnest manner enlisted the sympathy of her hear-
